Agency's Interpretation of the Survey Results:

This year's survey results suggest that respondents view their personal work experience somewhat more favorably than other aspects of the organization such as performance culture and leadership, and their overall job satisfaction.

The vast majority of respondents enjoy the work they do (91%) and most feel a sense of personal accomplishment (74%); however, fewer respondents have trust and confidence in their supervisors (55%) and believe that their immediate supervisors are doing a good job (52%). Similar results were found in the area of recruitment, development, and retention. Although a large majority of respondents believe their work is important (87%) and believe their talents are used well in the work environment (74%), fewer respondents agree that they know how their work relates to the agency's goals and priorities (65%). And while 55% of respondents agree that their training needs are assessed, less than half are satisfied with the training they have received for their present jobs (48%).

The areas of performance culture and leadership generate less satisfaction and agreement on the part of respondents. For example, while 57% agree that their performance appraisal is a fair reflection of their performance, fewer than half say they understood what they needed to do to be rated at a different performance level (48%). Additionally, respondents are less likely to agree that promotions are merit-based (43%) or that raises depend on how well employees perform their jobs (26%). Indeed, less than one-quarter of respondents believe that steps are taken to deal with poor performers (22%), while 39% agree that creativity and innovation are rewarded.

Similarly, with respect to leadership, a little more than a quarter of respondents believe that leaders within the organization generate high levels of motivation, review and evaluate the organization's progress toward meeting goals and objectives, and communicate the organization's goals and priorities. Conversely, respondents overwhelmingly agree that their supervisors support their need to balance work and family issues (91%). However, while over half of the respondents find that their supervisors work well with employees of different backgrounds (57%) and that their personal workloads are reasonable (65%), they feel much less empowered with respect to the agency's work processes, as indicated by only 30% agreeing with that statement.

In a similar fashion, when asked about levels of satisfaction with their involvement in decisions that affect their work, the policies and practices of senior leaders, and with the sharing of information from management about what goes on in the organization, a majority indicated dissatisfaction (52%, 61%, and 65%, respectively). When asked how satisfied they are with their job, 52% of respondents said they are "very satisfied" or "satisfied" with their job, yet only 36% indicated satisfaction with the organization as a whole.

Thirty-four (34) full-time permanent employees of the agency were surveyed. Twenty-three (23) employees completed the survey.

Definitions

(The survey results should be viewed in the context of the following definitions)

Executives	Members of the Senior Executive Service or equivalent.
Managers	Those in management positions who typically supervise one or more supervisors.
Supervisors	First-line supervisors who do not supervise other supervisors; typically those who are responsible for employees' performance appraisals and approval of their leave.
Team Leaders	Not official supervisors; those who provide employees with day-to-day guidance in work projects, but do not have supervisory responsibilities or conduct performance appraisals.
Senior Leaders	The heads of departments/agencies and their immediate leadership team. Typically these individuals would be members of the Senior Executive Service or equivalent.
Customers	Anyone who uses or receives the products or services your organization provides; may include individuals within your organization and individuals outside your organization.
Leaders	This is your agency's management team. This includes anyone with supervisory or managerial responsibilities.
Non-Supervisor	Anyone who does not have supervisory/team leader responsibilities.

Work Unit	This is your immediate work unit headed by your immediate supervisor.
Organization	This is your agency, office, or division. Please respond to these questions based on the level in your organization that is appropriate for the content of the question. Depending on how your organization is structured, this could either be one or more levels above your own.
Agency	An executive agency as defined in 5 U.S.C. 105
